Oregon Ballet Theatre welcomes four dynamic dancers to its company and promotes two talented apprentices to launch its 2022/23 Season

Oregon Ballet Theatre (OBT) Interim Artistic Director Peter Franc has announced exciting additions to the company’s dancer roster effective with the 2022/23 Season, which opens this fall with the return of Christopher Stowell’s beloved production of A Midsummer Night’s Dream.

“It is with great pleasure that I welcome four incredible new company members as well as celebrate the promotions of two extremely talented OBT artists,” said Franc. “These changes reflect the growing technical strength of the company and will help us reach even higher levels of artistry.”

Welcome Soloist Carly Wheaton!

Carly Wheaton from BalletMet will join OBT as a soloist. A California native, Wheaton trained at the renowned San Francisco Ballet School. She went on to dance with Ballet Memphis and The Washington Ballet prior to joining BalletMet in 2015. Wheaton has performed major classic leading roles including Giselle and Cinderella and has been featured in neoclassical works such as Jerome Robbins’ Interplay, and as the Russian Girl in George Balanchine’s Serenade (pictured). In 2016,
Wheaton participated in the Emmy Award-winning production of Becoming Violet, a dance film directed by Steven Weinzierl and choreographed by BalletMet Artistic Edwaard Liang.

Asia Bui from Sarasota Ballet, Gavin Hounslow from Boulder Ballet, and Nicholas Sakai from Eugene Ballet will be entering OBT as company artists. Joining them are recently promoted OBT apprentices Leigh Goldberger and Isaac Lee, both recently featured in the OBT’s summer program The Americans Take Two. OBT’s junior company members Medea Cullumbine-Robertson and Isichel Perez Rivero will be coming on as apprentices following their recent success in OBT School’s annual On Stage performance as well as featured roles in the OBT2 Spring Tour.

While welcoming these talented dancers, Franc extended his gratitude and well wishes to several departing artists. OBT congratulates Coco Alvarez-Mena on her acceptance to Joffrey Ballet Chicago and to Abigail Concannon and Niko Yaroslaski on their acceptance to Nevada Ballet Theatre. The company also honored retiring dancer Colby Parsons. Parsons danced with OBT since 2014 and will be remembered for many wonderful roles including Prince Charming in Ben Stevenson’s Cinderella, the Cavalier in George Balanchine’s The Nutcracker, and most recently for his portrayal of Dracula in Ben Stevenson’s Dracula.
